Jatin was very proud of his family. His father was a soldier. Jatin's ambition was to join the army and protect his country.

Jatin lived in the quarters at the army base. He studied in the army school. In the evening, he played in the park near the army base. One day when he was returning from his evening play, one handsome man stopped him. The man must have been about twenty-five years of age.

The man asked him to give a packet to the guards at the army base. He said, "Please give this packet of chocolates to the guards who work so hard". Jatin took the packet and nodded his head.

Jatin quietly followed the man to the hut. Peeping through the window of the hut, Jatin saw the man talking to some strangers. He understood that the packet had a bomb. It would explode when the packet was opened. The strangers would then enter the army base and kill the soldiers.
