Q. 6-10 Read the following passage and answer the questions given after it:

From the very beginning, man has attempted what has seemed impossible. Man is different from the rest of the creation in this respect. He has an eternal thirst for adventure. This has led to countless new discoveries and inventions. Human curiosity is limitless. It is responsible for space flights and moon landings.

The desire to know what lies beyond the visible world takes many forms. The Everest hero Tenzing and the hero of the 'Seven Seas', Mihir Sen, were inspired by the same restless spirit. Astronauts Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin, who were the first humans to set foot on the soil of the moon, have proved beyond doubt that man shall not rest until he has conquered the entire universe.

Now the question arises: Is it enough to know and master nature? To answer it, one should first answer a more basic question: which is more important – knowing and understanding the world around you or knowing and understanding yourself? Everyone will agree that in the absence of self – knowledge, even the most advanced knowledge of the universe will not only be useless but also dangerous.

Q.11-15. Read the following passage and answer the questions given after it:

If people who commit crimes are not punished, they will go on committing crimes. We have, therefore, a police force for investigating crimes and apprehending criminals. In the same way, if there are disputes among persons over property, contracts, rights and other matters, they have to be decided in a court of law. They are called civil cases and are decided by the law courts according to the civil law. Cases of crime are dealt with according to the criminal law. It is not easy to find out whether a person accused of committing a crime is really guilty, so in every such case evidence has to be produced to show whether he did or did not commit the crime. In civil cases also, each party to a case has to produce evidence to prove its claim. The process of administering justice is quite complicated, but if justice is not done, there is great disorder.

The administration of justice was much more difficult in Akbar's time. There were different systems of law and different customs that were believed to be as binding as laws, and all the people wanted their disputes to be settled according to their own particular laws and customs. In the villages, people had to be left to settle their own disputes in the village panchayats. This did not always mean that the law was followed or justice done. Even now, we see that there are two or more parties in every village, and matters are considered more on a party basis than according to what is just and right. Now, villagers have the opportunity to take their disputes to the law courts for settlement, but that is a tedious and costly process. In Akbar's time also, it was possible for a person who felt that injustice had been done to him, to appeal to a government officer.

11. A police force is necessary because it

- 1) settles disputes among persons
- 2) decides civil cases
- 3) inquires into crimes and arrests criminals
- 4) punishes those who commit crimes.

12. "We have, therefore, a police force for investigating crimes and apprehending criminals."

The word apprehending here means

- | | |
|------------------|--------------|
| 1) understanding | 2) arresting |
| 3) recognizing | 4) punishing |

13. "The process of administering justice is quite complicated, but if justice is not done, there is great disorder." This sentence implies that

- 1) disorder results in the process of administering justice.
- 2) disorder is created because justice is administered in a complicated way.
- 3) absence of justice leads to disorder.
- 4) the cause of disorder is always absence of justice.

14. "There were different systems of law and different customs that were believed to be as binding as laws, and all the people wanted their disputes to be settled according to their own particular laws and customs."
