(46-50) Read the following passage

There was great feasting in the city of Troy that night. Sinon had told his story well, and the Trojans really believed that they were safe at last. Their long siege was ended, and, with their own eyes, they had seen the hated Greeks sail away. The walls had been broken, and the great wooden horse had been dragged into the city and placed before the temple of Athens. Now all the Trojans were lying in a heavy, dreamless sleep, and Sinon stole gently through the silent streets towards the high watch-tower. No guard was there: they were all sleeping or feasting still. Sinon lighted a great fire in the tower, and then made his way to the temple, to where the wooden horse shone white in the moonlight. He called in a low voice to the heroes inside, and they all came out, down the ladder which Epeus had built for them. They ran to the doors of the nearest houses and began to burn and kill, and the rest of the army-returning in their ships-poured in through the break in the walls, and Troy was won.
